TEN YEARS AGO
From Bullock Times, April 13, 1944

J. S. Hawkins, farmer of his field last week, uncovered two hams and the next day their dog dragged in a third one from the field. The hams were there? Because the dog lived after devouring part of his ham, members of the Hawkins family felt safe in using the other two—and they were good!

Farm Bureau
Activities

(By BYRON DYER)
Georgia's state prison is not a chain-gang, but an institution, Rev. W. L. Huggins, chaplain of the prison, told the Midgarden Farm Bureau Thursday night. People coming to the prison are from all walks of life. The rehabilitation program carried on there is designed to take care of the various groups. He pointed out that cabinet shop was for skilled carpenters, whereas the average carpenter is used in maintenance work around the farm. Industrial arts and home economics are given lots of attention under the best of supervision, Mr. Huggins stated. He displayed numerous leather articles made by the prisoners that were comparable to any found anywhere. Many of the women become experts in the sewing room where electric machines for sewing and cutting garments are used.

Mr. H. Metts, president of the Bullock County Rural Telephone Co-op, advised the group that the actual staking of lines had started, and that three crews would be in action during next week. He predicted that activity in the rural telephone program would pick up considerably during the next few days. W. O. Griner, a member of the board of directors for the co-op, told the Ivanhoe group that the additional $87,000 needed to complete the telephone project had been approved and all the loan documents had been executed. He was not too optimistic about the possible cut in date, however, he did say it would not be as long now as it had been.

The Ivanhoe group discussed the need for a definite meeting time on first Friday night, but concluded that the time used for the past 22 years was satisfactory. The group started off meeting at "first dark" in 1932 and have continued that practice down through the years.

A study of the records on the state five-acre cotton contest since 1947 was given those at the two meetings last week, which showed that close spacing of cotton, ample fertilizer, and an insect control program started in time and kept up long enough made more cotton for the grower. A motion picture made of the wild life in the Congo River Basin, Africa, was a part of the Ivanhoe program.

On sale in bookstores in Georgia and throughout the nation this week, and written by a member of the Georgia Teachers College faculty, is a non-fiction book described by advance reviewers as "A great, outstanding, and unique work."

"I Was a Stranger," a comprehensive study of the life and faith of William Booth and his founding of the Salvation Army, written by Harold C. Steele, was released March 24 by Exposition Press.

Harold C. Steele, instructor of Biology at Georgia Teachers College, is a native of Atlanta. A biologist by training, experience, and profession, with a secondary interest in sociology, he combines his interests and experience in both fields with a long curiosity and an eagerness as excellent researcher and careful writer in producing his first major literary work.

"We Are a Part of the Towns We Serve"

Says HOWARD P. NEAL, JR., STATESBORO DISTRICT SERVICEMAN

"In many ways, the Georgia Power Company is a definite part of each town we serve. Wherever we go, we build things that are permanent: offices and stores, transmission lines, distribution lines and substations—works that are physically rooted in the community.

"We pay taxes, like other citizens. We take part in civic activities. We promote better home towns, industrial development and better agricultural practices. We know that whatever benefits the towns we serve, benefits us. So we do what we can to help them prosper.

"All of our employees are citizens, too. Eighteen are citizens of Statesboro. They are your friends and neighbors. They live here and raise their families here. They belong to local churches and civic clubs, take an active part in community activities and work to make Statesboro a better and more prosperous place in which to live.

"Yes, we ARE a part of the community—and we're proud to be 'A Citizen Wherever We Serve.'"

HOWARD P. NEAL, JR., is one of Georgia Power's servicemen in Statesboro. He has been with the Company 14 years and has been living in Statesboro six years. Mr. Neal and his wife Betty have one daughter and one son. They live on Vista Circle.

Noise And Oysters.

AT THE OLD school house in the woods at which this writer attained his education during the years preceding his thirteenth birthday, Mrs. Jennie R. Plumb, whose name was mentioned in a recent issue of this paper, often gave us assignments of philosophy. One of the phrases which has recently been aroused in our mind was this unique question, "What kind of noise annoys an oyster?" The reply to which was "A noisy noise annoys an oyster."

At the very center of the city of Statesboro on a recent morning near the postoffice there came rushing and rumbling in close contact a string of mammoth trucks wearing tags indicating location at separate points of the universe extending from the lower points in Florida to a far-away destination in California. They fairly shook the earth with their noise. The street passage light happened to be set for go ahead and they went by without hesitancy.

And this movement gave occasion to the wonder why the intelligent management of a city like Statesboro should not provide a convenient urban passage way for these non-stop obstructions and thereby provide passage ways and stopping place for those conveyances and travelers who may have business reasons for the more convenient use of the mid-city thoroughfares. Can anybody imagine the answer? Can anybody ignore the fact that congestion of the streets with non-stop vehicles is an interference with those who have had need for the near-in and the nearby parking facilities?

Parking posts have been removed from many of the most convenient up-town locations, and only recently a modern trading place has been located with parking conveniences, which has sprung into importance, and is inevitably taking toll from the up-town concerns which are being squeezed for want of up-town parking space.

Bulloch County Bank Has Birthday Began Business April 14, 1934

ON THIS, the eve of our Twentieth Anniversary, we pause to render an accounting of the trust that has been placed in us.

BACK IN the dark days of 1933 and 1934, it took real courage and vision to carry through to actual opening a new financial institution, but we based our confidence on the strength and stability of Bulloch county people, and in the strong belief that Bulloch county is the BEST agricultural county in Georgia, and with a determined faith in the American way of life, such plans were carried through. Following the leadership of the original Board of Directors, three of whom are still active in the management of the bank, necessary capital was subscribed.

WE PAUSE here in loving memory and lasting respect to Mr. S. W. Lewis and Mr. W. J. Rackley, their vision and determination, and to their wisdom in charting a wise course from the start. Their passing was a great loss. The present management feels very much its responsibility in carrying on in serving this territory as they had planned.

THEREFORE, at this time, the entire staff of the bank, directors, officers and employees, take this opportunity, on its twentieth birthday, to thank our customers and our friends who have made our growth and success possible. We have been greatly blessed and have tried to render every service possible, consistent with sound business principles.

BASED on our past record, and with a stronger determination than ever before to live up to our full responsibility, we invite the public to use our services in every way possible. We have unbounded faith in the future, and relying on Divine guidance, we pledge our best efforts toward building a greater nation.

BELOW is a comparison of our resources, showing the growth of our bank year by year, from a small beginning to the present:

FORESTRY UNIT

By J. W. Roberts, Co. Forest Ranger, Phone 501-L.

Georgia's tree crops and the values manufactured from these crops add $600,000,000, or an average of $24 for each forest acre, to the wealth of the state. J. W. Roberts, Forest Ranger for the Bulloch County Forestry Unit pointed out this week.

"Citizens of Bulloch county," he declared, "gain both directly and indirectly from the income produced by the tree crops grown in our county and state. Despite that fact, however, there still are many persons who do not realize what they are losing whenever wildfire strikes this area."

"Your personal health and industrial development depend on a good water supply," the County Forestry Unit head explained, "and many of us have been depressed at the sight of badly eroded hillsides and silt covered valleys. Burned over areas are not attractive for camping and hunting and fishing are not as good on destructively burned areas."

The Ranger added that wildfires deprives Bulloch county citizens of their fullest enjoyment and use of all the good things provided by their forests.

"Fire," he added, "is a destructive agent, and the only time it can serve man properly is when it is under control. Wildfire in the woods is not controlled, and it is a killer. This fact must be clearly understood by every man, woman and child in this area before wildfire can be driven from our Bulloch county woods."
